

This summer Elm class have been learning about chocolate. Where it originates from and how it is packaged and sold to us in the UK. Our learning was enhanced by a trip to the Cadbury factory in Bournville. We have since designed, created our own chocolate bars as well as making our own adverts!

Milly modelled a Mayan king who would often drink chocolate to show off his wealth.

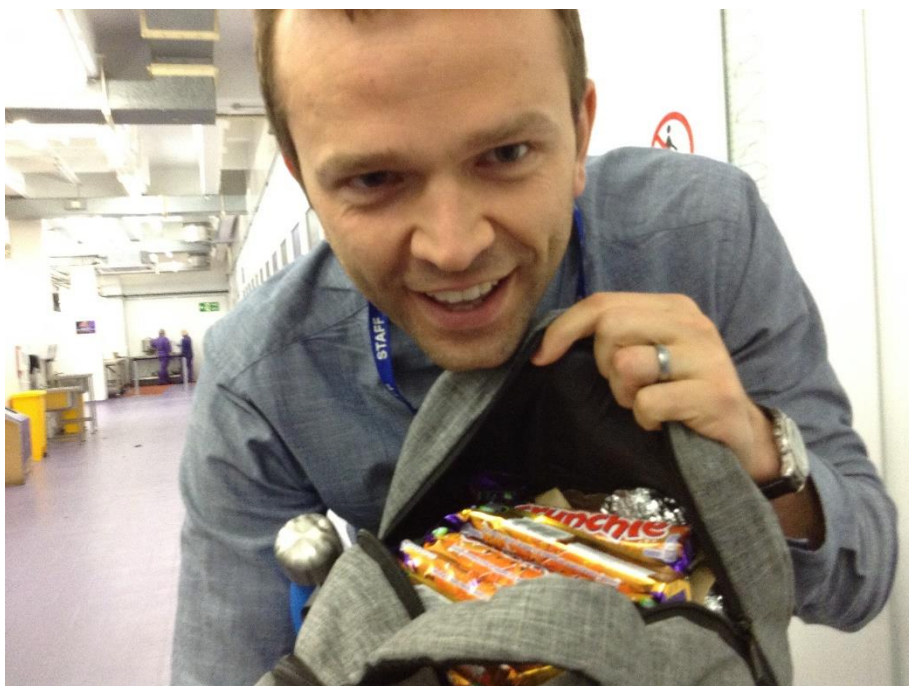

We also learnt about Fairtrade and making sure that farmers are respected within chocolate production. Here Lily models a present from the Ghanaian Fairtrade farmers to Cadbury as thanks for their continued links.

Some parts of the factory were especially fun, why use a pen when you can use chocolate?

There was even the occasional 'freebie' .

Nobody likes going home at the end of the day
