

REMEMBERING HER MAJESTY, THE QUEEN

Alveley Primary have taken time to remember the dedication, commitment and service The Queen has shown to the United Kingdom and the wider Commonwealth. They watched videos of commemoration to her life and each class produced artwork to remember Her Majesty, Queen Elizabeth II. Children in EYFS discussed The Queen and produced an embellished crown as well as some of their own Queen portraits. In Cedar class, children drew Queen portraits and had a thoughtful and respectful discussion about The Queen, The Royal Family and what it meant to them. Elm class produced beautiful art pieces inspired by the work of artist Eleonor Tomlinson, the artist who created the Paddington Bear prints for the Platinum Jubilee. In Oak Class, the children created amazing art pieces using photos of the Queen and mirroring her expression and facial features. Children were very considered in their respectful discussions about the Queen's passing and how she will be remembered; as well as how this changes the Royal Family and the line of succession.
